This architectural drawing illustrates a symmetrical library interior. The space is defined by two long, rectangular tables, each supported by four ornate, tapered legs. On the tables, three desk lamps with conical shades are positioned. Behind the tables is a large wall of windows. The lower portion of the window wall consists of a grid of small rectangular panes. Above this, three large arched windows are set into the wall, each divided into four vertical sections. The top of the wall features a decorative arched frieze. On either side of the central window area, a spiral staircase with a decorative metal railing leads to an upper level. The drawing is annotated with numerous dimensions in meters, indicating the scale and proportions of the design. A total width dimension of 13.05 m is shown at the bottom center.
